The property

Located on the River Kennet, this Georgian house dates back to 1800. The ruins of the original Georgian paper mill are still found within the grounds of the property. It was purchased by our clients in 2011 and is the former home of the singer and song writer Kate Bush who repurposed the outbuildings to house a dance and recording studio. The current owners have invested heavily to create what exists today which included significant repairs and maintenance to the mill, and reconstructing the river banks.

Listed Grade II, the main residence is a refurbished and modernised, red-brick, Georgian period house which as part of the full renovation and upgrading programme in 2015 was taken back to the bare brick and has seen the addition of a striking, contemporary glass extension, perfectly contrasting the period features with the new. The footprint of the house has increased in size by 50%. The house has four double bedrooms all with en-suite bathrooms. The principal bedroom measures nearly 500 sq ft in size and has views down onto water and the historic remains of the water mill. There are a number of downstairs reception rooms, allowing for a various uses with a drawing room, relaxed sitting room, study, and library. Arguably the most impressive room is the spectacular glass extension, orangery measuring nearly 1200 sq ft and enjoying exceptional views across the gardens and the river with a modern 75ft steel and tile footbridge as a central feature. The high-end Smallbone kitchen includes Gaggenau appliances and, also has a secondary, prep kitchen. Via a glass link this is connected to a large laundry and boot room with access to a wide double garage, easily capable of accommodating large, modern vehicles. The entire house benefits from underfloor heating as well as air conditioning and air recirculation. The property is extremely environmentally efficient and heated and cooled via air source heat pumps.

Other accommodation exists in the form of firstly the former recording studio which has been transformed into a smart three bedroom property with a living room and kitchen, where there is also additional garaging in the form of a triple garage, meaning five in total. There is also a Victorian period, two bedroom, two bathroom cottage with an orangery extension which has proved very comfortable for equally guests and staff in the past. There is also another building which was formerly a dance / rehearsal studio with views onto the Kennet which is currently useful for storage but subject to planning has potential to be repurposed.

Outside

The house and outbuildings are set in beautifully landscaped gardens, which sit alongside the River Kennet where it is possible to fish with fishing rights. The gardens are a haven for wildlife including kingfishers and kestrels due to its riverside setting, There are pristine lawns, with various paths flanked by neat yew hedging, walled gardens, including a manicured rose and acer garden and a multitude of mature specimen trees together with a range of ornamental trees planted over the last ten years. There are also plenty of well-stocked flower beds. A major feature are the ruins of the historic mill itself with its water wheels which we understand in the 1870's employed around 100 workers and was sadly later destroyed by fire. The entire plot measures 22.54 acres and in addition to the immediate gardens, a proportion of this are securely fenced, agricultural fields with some mobile animal shelters to house a variety of grazing livestock. An unusual but very useful feature is a private hydro electrical scheme created by the current owner, employing a 3 metre diameter Archimedes screw which generates (on average) 40kw per hour of electricity that not only powers the entire estate for self-sufficiency but has the ability to generate a significant annual income.

The property also benefits from a 22kw EV charger due to the three-phase power supply. With all energy requirements more than covered by the output from the Hydroelectric scheme this estate must surely be considered the ultimate eco home.
